

High Line Nine is honored to welcome Makoto Fujimura for his monumental exhibit, "Re-membrance".

- Opening: Thursday, September 9th 6-8:30 PM
- Exhibit: 9/2-9/30 (Open Tue to Sat 11-6 pm)
- High Line Nine, 508 W. 28th St. Gallery 4
- Masks and proof of vaccination required for entry

In this "Re-membrance" exhibit, Fujimura presents three new major works of transcendent beauty created out of traumas of our times: the 9/11 terrorist attacks (marking its 20 year anniversary this September), the 3/11/2011 Great Tohoku earthquake, tsunami and ongoing nuclear meltdown, and the Columbine High School shooting in 1999.

About Makoto Fujimura

Fujimura is an American-born artist of Japanese roots whose refractive surfaces using the traditional Nihonga (Japanese style painting) materials, fused with space-age materials form a uniquely contemporary expression. Fujimura is a leading figure in the “slow art” movement, with his work being described by David Brooks of the New York Times as “a small rebellion against the quickening of time”.
